Abstract:

The world has recently been exposed and is still experiencing an unprecedented health crisis that has cast its shadow over all aspects of life, whether governmental or private, which requires taking a set of economic, social and legal measures to adapt to the outcomes of this crisis, and administrative contracts are among the most negatively affected by such actions. The circumstances, as they were established and agreed upon in economic conditions completely different to the circumstances in which these obligations must be fulfilled, and this is what prompted the legislator and the judiciary to create a legal theory to deal with volatile and unstable economic conditions, and it has its own importance as it came to guarantee an important principle of the general principles of law, which is the principle The public facility is running regularly and steadily and the public service is not interrupted by the users.

key words:

administrative contracts, financial balance of the contract, contingency theory, administrative responsibility, theory of the prince's action, economic conditions, COVID-19.
