

Complete each of the following texts with the given words.

WORDS : showed up -Dropped - glanced around - spotted - retrieve - For a while - wait for her - browsed through - lying on - One day -

....., I was on a train when Ia phone the floor. I but couldn't figure out who might have it. After a few minutes of indecision, I finally picked it up. It was a sleek, modern phone, still powered on. Out of curiosity, I the contacts and opened a text message, but the language was unfamiliar to me. I decided to send a message in English to a few contacts in the phone. I wrote, 'Please inform the owner of this phone to contact me,' and included my own number.

....., nothing happened. Just as I was about to leave the train, the phone rang. I answered, and a woman's voice, speaking English, said, 'Hi, I think you have my phone!' I explained the situation, and she asked if I could at the station café. She promised to come and the phone.

An hour later, she That's how I met Olga, who later became my wife.

WORDS : showed up -Dropped - glanced around - spotted - retrieve - For a while - wait for her - browsed through - lying on - One day -

....., I was on a train when Ia phone the floor. I but couldn't figure out who might have it. After a few minutes of indecision, I finally picked it up. It was a sleek, modern phone, still powered on. Out of curiosity, I the contacts and opened a text message, but the language was unfamiliar to me. I decided to send a message in English to a few contacts in the phone. I wrote, 'Please inform the owner of this phone to contact me,' and included my own number.

....., nothing happened. Just as I was about to leave the train, the phone rang. I answered, and a woman's voice, speaking English, said, 'Hi, I think you have my phone!' I explained the situation, and she asked if I could at the station café. She promised to come and the phone.

An hour later, she That's how I met Olga, who later became my wife.

One day, I was on a train when I spotted a phone lying on the floor. I glanced around but couldn't figure out who might have dropped it. After a few minutes of indecision, I finally picked it up. It was a sleek, modern phone, still powered on. Out of curiosity, I browsed through the contacts and opened a text message, but the language was unfamiliar to me. I decided to send a message in English to a few contacts in the phone. I wrote, 'Please inform the owner of this phone to contact me,' and included my own number.

For a while, nothing happened. Just as I was about to leave the train, the phone rang. I answered, and a woman's voice, speaking English, said, 'Hi, I think you have my phone !' I explained the situation, and she asked if I could wait for her at the station café. She promised to come and retrieve the phone.

An hour later, she showed up. That's how I met Olga, who later became my wife.